Canada and the Jewish Board of Deputies

We are pleased to call attention to the letter printed in another column from Mr. Charles H. L. Emanuel, the solicitor and secretary of the Jewish Board of Deputies. Mr. Emanuel offers some comment on the editorial that appeared in the REVIEW a few weeks ago, in which we discussed the relations of the Board of Deputies to the Jewish communities of the Dominions. His letter deserves careful and sympathetic consideration. There is a strong feeling in Canadian Jewry desirous of seeing a closer connection with the Anglo-Jewish community, and the Board of Deputies offers the possibility of a medium through which this might be brought about. British Jews have interests in common. Those interests are set forth clearly and convincingly in Mr. Emanuel's letter. It is undoubtedly true that unfavourable legislation in England affecting Jewish interests would prejudicially influence Canadian opinion. It is undoubtedly true that the Canadian press is influenced to no small degree by the English press. We have experienced only too often the difficulty of coping with the influence in Canada of the prejudiced attitude of English papers. We can tackle our local press, but what of the English papers that are so widely circulated in Canada? It cannot be too strongly stressed that we have a very vital interest in the conduct of Jewish affairs at the centre of the Empire. And we repeat what we have already said in our previous article, that the efforts of the Board through its Foreign Committee deserve all the support we can give. Mr. Emanuel's appeal for the added weight to the Board that Canadian affiliation would contribute is one that we cannot afford to pass lightly by. The Board's Foreign Committee is the most effective diplomatic agency that world Jewry possesses, and the Jews of Canada owe it to themselves and to their brethren in Europe to increase the strength of the Board. It is not a financial question, for the contribution of a congregation amounts to less than twenty-five cents per member. It is a question of adding moral prestige to an important and valuable institution.

We doubt, however, whether the present method of overseas membership in the Board has any real value either to the Board or to the congregations. It is not always possible to find a former member who has taken up residence in London, and it does not follow that such a representative would be desirable or useful. That this is apparently the prevailing opinion is borne out by the notably scanty representation on the Board of the South African and Australasian congregations. They have no alternative affiliations, such as we enjoy in Canada. They are undilutedly British. They are ecclesiastically dependent upon English Jewry. But the present system of "colonial" representation does not seem to suit them. As long as membership in the Board revolves mainly upon the selection of a delegate resident in London it is inevitable that overseas congregations remain unaffiliated.

Canadian Jewry would not delegate the conduct of its affairs or the expression of its views to a body so remote as the Board of Deputies. We like to send our own delegates to the conventions and conferences which direct our affairs. We like to be able to instruct them and to have them back to report to us. And we insist that those who are charged with the transaction of our communal business shall be immediately answerable to us. The Board of Deputies cannot serve us in these directions. We are cool towards the idea of loosely attached representatives who may not interpret our views. Colonialism has died out and we have no intention of reviving it.

We again suggest the experiment of an overseas committee. Such a committee, if sufficiently well informed and able to rise above the insularity which in many ways marks the Anglo-Jewish mind and repels us, might be able to arouse our interest and inspire our confidence. It would then be possible to change for the better the present detachment of Canadian Jewry from British affiliations. We believe that the important congregations in Canada are prepared to add their weight to the Board of Deputies in recognition of its status in and for British Jewry. We believe that they would readily co-operate with an overseas committee composed of men of standing and of broad outlook. But we know that they will not bother with the present system of representation.

Rabbi Stephen Wise on Federation

Dr. Stephen Wise's address last week to the Business Men's Council of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies has given rise to a feeling of doubt as to the merits of the Federation system of charity organization. Dr. Wise, in outlining some of the defects of Federation without laying stress on its undoubted virtues, was obviously giving only one side of the question, and for very good reasons. Those who were present realized why it was necessary for the speaker to refer to the shortcomings without enlarging upon the benefits. But it is perhaps a little discouraging when a purposely one-sided address receives a publicity which was not intended. Dr. Wise cannot quarrel with the report, for it was a good report of his speech. The misleading impression created is due to the calibre and nature of the gathering addressed. It was not a public meeting.

Dr. Wise would have been wasting his time and the time of the audience by dwelling on the acknowledged advantages of Federation. He had before him upwards of two hundred intelligent men. They had rallied to the call for help in collecting in a number of outstanding pledges. The dinner started punctually. That in itself was evidence of sincerity. It was quickly served, a sign of ordered efficiency. There was an unusual atmosphere of responsible understanding, conveying an impression of organization and appreciation. For such an audience it was not necessary to enlarge upon the virtues of charity. Those present were sold on the Federation idea, and he would indeed be a poor speaker who did not sense that. The appealing element of Dr. Wise's address had already been made by the audience itself. Having before him a fine set of the flower of Montreal's young Jewry, who were already taking their places as communal workers and leaders,

NATIONAL BUILDING

It is appropriate that the first "made in Canada" structure, the National Building, should be situated on one of the most historic properties in Toronto—land that has a romantic and colourful past. The actual ground itself was originally owned by the famous Jesse Ketchum, one of the city's most famous philanthropists. He bequeathed it to the city so that it might be used as a site for a fire hall.

Usually, when he made a deed of land, he was accustomed to extracting from the grantee a promise that no liquor would ever be sold on the premises. This condition was not, however, imposed on the city, when they acquired the property.

On it was erected the Bay Street Fire Hall, which until a year ago was a famous Toronto landmark. Last summer its time was up; the famous old building was pulled down. Shortly after this the city leased the land to the "347 Bay Street Corporation" for twenty-one years, renewable.

In the autumn of 1841 the Bay Street fire hall was built at Bay and Temperance. The city council voted the sum of 200 pounds for its construction. The accommodation until then were very bad, and members of the fire brigade petitioned the council several times to give them a better place for keeping their apparatus. The year after the first signs of a real organization of the fire department began to appear.

It was a one-storey structure with an attic, adorned with a small cupola. In 1871 it was remodelled and rebuilt, and as it was used for the headquarters of the department, offices were installed. Last year, its former glory faded, the building was turned over to a wrecking crew.

In the early days the hose engine and ladder wagons were hauled by volunteer firemen and among them many a first citizen pulled the primitive apparatus enthusiastically. The years passed, and horse-drawn apparatus was installed. Steam engines came in and the aerial truck replaced the small ladders. In recent years the station declined, and one summer day last year, the motor truck of the salvage corps rolled out of it for the last time.

Bay Street Hall was one of the two city halls visited by royalty. His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught once called there, and in 1902 Bay Street station paid its respects to their Majesties, the present King and Queen.

During its time the station produced some excellent officers, among them the present fire chief. Every big fire in Toronto's history was attended by men from this station. Its sections were first on the scene during the night of April 19, 1904, when Toronto's biggest fire—a ten million dollar conflagration—occurred. Other famous fires included one in 1855, when the Congregational Church, the building immediately to the south of it was burned—due, it was believed, to an incendiary. One of the earliest fires in the city's history was in 1842, when a machine shop was burned down, and several men arrested the day after, on a charge of incendiarism. They had been refused jobs that week. A wave of incendiary fires caused the city worry for many years.

The hall is mourned by veterans of the department—who miss the "ranch" as it was affectionately called where they gathered to exchange anecdotes of their experiences. Its wide open doors yawned familiarly at Toronto's citizens and its big bell, hung in the tower, tolled out its warning of fires in the vicinity.

On this historic spot the new National Building has been erected.

Harry Rotenberg and S. S. Yolles determined to construct a building that would be, as nearly as possible, 100 per cent. "made in Canada." They fulfilled the ideals which they had set before them. The building that stands at 347 Bay Street has indeed

HARDWARE

THE hardware in a building is its mechanical or operating equipment. It is working and subject to use and abuse from the day the building is completed till it is torn down. It is therefore uneconomical to use anything but the best and most suitable hardware available in any class of building; especially is this so since the actual difference in cost between a job well done and one skimped to the danger point, is usually not more than 25% or 30%, which means a practically negligible percentage on the total cost of the building. A poor hardware job is a source of worry and annoyance and endless expense keeping it in repair almost from its installation, whereas a good job should be a source of pleasure from its mechanical and artistic excellence, and no expense at all during the building's lifetime! What is the answer? Surely there is only one. We feel qualified to give you advice on practically all hardware problems.

ROUMANIAN ELECTIONS AND THE JEWS

The Government of Roumania has made certain gestures to the Jews now before the elections, but the Jews are rather incredulous and really expect very little to come out of the present situation. The last gesture was the inclusion of the name of Rabbi Zirelsohn, Chief Rabbi of Kishineff and former deputy in the list of candidates for the Senate sponsored by the party in power. The anti-Semitic party, with Professor Cuza at their head, has been working strenuously to arouse animosity against the Jews and thus prevent them from obtaining any seat in the new Parliament. Agitators have been going about in the towns and villages, inducing the peasants to take a definite stand against any Jewish candidate.

Five hundred houses in the Jewish quarter in the Town of Bakau were destroyed by a fire which claimed also some human victims and reduced the Jewish population to a state of destitution. The Jewish community of Bucharest has sent some help for the immediate relief of the sufferers most of whom are lying in the streets without shelter, while the hospitals are overcrowded with the wounded.

The law passed by the former Minister of Education, Dr. Angelescu, to the effect that all teachers who seek positions in schools in Roumania must be graduates of some college, has caused much concern to the Jews, since most of the Hebrew teachers come from Bessarabia and have had no opportunity to receive a college training, although their knowledge of the subjects of instruction may be adequate. The language of instruction in most subjects should be the Roumanian, which is not well known to these teachers. Efforts are being made to modify the law.

Annual Report of Federation of Jewish Philanthropies

By JOSEPH A. WOOLF, Executive Director

The Federation of the Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto, after nine years of struggle, has now become what its founders in 1916 and 1917 hoped it would be from the very beginning, an organization raising and spending during the year in communal work the approximate sum of $100,000.

I think it can be safely said that the Federation has turned the psychological corner. The Federation is no longer an uncertainty, no longer an organization struggling for existence, nor an organization that can do only bare remedial work. The Federation can now look forward to a career of constructive social service. It can now afford its affiliated agencies more than the absolute minimum. It can begin to treat the poor of the city on a standard higher and finer than that of providing only the barest necessities of food and shelter. The rejuvenation of the Federation which the 1924 campaign achieved bore its fruit in the campaign of last winter.

In the past two years there has been a steady enlargement of family welfare work. During 1925, 234 families were assisted financially while over 80 other families were given personal service (medical, legal employment, etc.), and over 70 families were visited on behalf of relatives in other cities. Of the families financially assisted, 106 were given various amounts up to $50 each, 85 others from $50 to $200 each, 31 from $200 to $400 and 17 families over $400 each. The last 17 received a total of $9,189. While every case that comes up cannot even yet, because of lack of funds receive the fullest assistance it needs, the Family Welfare Board has been able to do a little more for its families than ever before. While for 1923 the Federation expended less than $27,000 for family welfare work and in 1924 a little under $30,000, last year for the ten months from March 1 to December 31, $28,000 were appropriated by Federation or at the rate of $32,000 for twelve months, and last October the Federation Board authorized the Family Welfare Bureau to spend $35,000 a year.

The Children's Home Extension authorized by the Federation, toward the end of 1924 and begun in January, 1925, has been completed and is now occupied. The entire cost, amounting to about $13,000, has been met from current special funds as the structure was being erected.

The Boys' and Girls' Clubs have been enabled to do a little more constructive work. The Boys' Club in particular met a decided need in the congested sections of West Toronto by opening a branch on the grounds of the Children's Home on Annette Street. One of the results of last winter's campaign was an increased appropriation for the work of these two organizations in their endeavour to provide wholesome recreation and a Jewish environment for boys and girls who would otherwise be on the streets in the evenings or else enjoy the hospitality of missions and proselytizing recreation centres. We have by no means reached the apex of this work. There are thousands of boys and girls from ten years of age to fifteen who are to-day receiving neither an iota of Jewish education nor the wholesome recreational Jewish environment that an enlarged Jewish boys' club and Jewish girls' club could provide.

The Maternity Ladies' Aid, in their care of prospective mothers and of motherless infants, met all calls.

One of the developments of the past two years is the work of the Girls' Camp at Whitby. This camp is operated and to a large degree financed by the Junior Council of Jewish Women. Two years ago only 76 girls were accommodated. Last summer at no additional expense to Federation, by adding a little more equipment and cutting the period from two weeks to ten days, 107 girls were taken out. This summer with still further additional equipment and some alteration at the cottage, 180 girls will be provided with ten days' outings at an additional cost of only 25 per cent. to the Federation. In other words in two years the camp facilities have been increased by almost 150 per cent. at an added expense of only 25 per cent. to the Federation.

Probably the most outstanding achievement of Federation last year was the Membership Campaign, held last December. When we consider that three months before the campaign opened there was, because of the prevailing business depression, such doubt and uncertainty about the success of the campaign that it was seriously considered not to hold a large public drive for funds, the success of the campaign is all the more striking. One of the chief supporters of the Federation was convinced that all that could be accomplished was to hold the present membership in line and possibly add $5,000 more. Instead of that 300 new members were obtained and the total subscriptions increased from $65,000 to over $92,000.

In the first place we haven't begun to handle our family relief work as it should be done. The Federation officers, boards and workers can go only so far as the community will allow. But the Federation, as the community agency, or better still the Jewish community of Toronto, as organized and represented through the Federation, is not meeting its poverty problems as they should be met. The standard of relief is what any particular family that asks for assistance needs. After all the problem of relief is relatively simple. After it is ascertained that a family is worthy and cannot help itself nor can assistance be gotten from other sources, the question arises what are the needs of that family in dollars and cents. Rent must be paid, light and heat must be furnished, a definite minimum amount of wholesome, nourishing food must be allowed. If sickness exists, medicines, and often special foods, must be supplied. How much does a family of two adults and three or four small children require for decent living, not merely to keep from starving? If the children are of school age they must go to school decently dressed. If the family is found living in one or two filthy, dark, dirty rooms, it must be removed to more wholesome quarters. The minimum decencies of life, even for those who come to Federation, must be preserved. Such a family of average size needs in Toronto from $20 to $25 per week or from $85 to $100 per month. We know that, not only from painstaking studies made by other organizations but from our own experience with the families we are trying to help. There is no question that $50,000 per year for family welfare work is the least we should have for fairly decent relief work. But that means an income of not less than $125,000 for Federation.

Another vital need is the development of a Children's Bureau for the placing and supervision of children in private homes. Even if we wanted to place children in the Home on Annette Street we cannot do it because it is already filled up. But we dare not board children out without rigid supervision. That means one or two full time workers and a fund from which to pay for the children's board. Such work cannot be done at present under the restricted income of Federation. For the coming year one more worker added to the Family Welfare Bureau and an appropriation of $4,000 would be sufficient to launch this work.

A striking need is that of an Employment Bureau with the services of a full-time worker. We have attempted

A Message to the Public

By HARRY ROTENBERG
President of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto

The Federation has completed nine years of service and we are now well launched upon the tenth year.

It is evident that the Federation is gradually getting older and soon should be fully grown. Though some of us cannot look backward over all of its history, all can and should take careful account of what is happening. For that reason our annual reports offer a welcome opportunity to review work which has been accomplished or undertaken. The executive director's report, together with a financial statement of our activities, gives a fairly detailed account of the past year's events.

I wish to express the appreciation of the executive to those who helped throughout the past year in the work we had to do, and particularly in the last drive when we were successful in getting the largest amount ever raised in Toronto for local Jewish philanthropic purposes. At the same time I would like to bring to your attention the actual need of our community. This need is increasing yearly, and in order to meet the demand we require an active interest of many of our community who have so far merely looked on. It is only with a large increase in our membership that we can solve our problems, and every subscriber should realize his own responsibility to interest others in our work. Out of a population of over forty thousand Jews, it is outrageous that we have such a small percentage coming forward with their help. Just think of it! We have at present, less than fifteen hundred actual subscribers. Our requirement, in order to do really effective work is at least $150,000 annually, and I feel certain that if our people would take the interest that the Federation work deserves, such an amount could be secured.

The Business Men's Council and the board of trustees will endeavour during the summer and autumn months to increase the membership of Federation. It is my ardent wish that every Jewish family in Toronto be represented on the membership roll. Three thousand or 4,000 members are not too few for the Toronto community.

Federation Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, was held Sunday afternoon, June 13, in the Talmud Torah Auditorium. Harry Rotenberg, president, presided. Reports were given by Mrs. Norman Helpert, for the Children's Home; Mrs. Harry Clavir, for the Maternity Ladies' Aid; Mrs. Percy Hermant, for the Girls' Club; Mrs. Chas. Draimin, for the Faimly Welfare Bureau; and Harold Levi, for the Boys' work. Charles Draimin, Edmund Scheuer, Abraham Cohen and Joseph A. Woolf, directors of the Federation, spoke.

The following were elected to the board of trustees for three years: S Bennett, David Dunkelman, S. Harris, Henry Greisman, Wm. Leibel, David Levinne, E. Pullan, H. Samuel, Jos. Tarshis, S. Webber.

Louis M. Cahn, executive director of the Federation of Jewish Charities of Chicago, and president the past year of the National Conference of Jewish Social Service, was the guest of honour, and spoke on "Present Day Tendencies in Jewish Communal Work." He said:

"The development of Jewish social service the past five years has been along two well defined lines; one, that of more effective and constructive work with the families and individuals requiring assistance; and the other, of a greater inclusion of communal activities under the direction of the Federation.

"A family in need must be maintained in an adequate manner, and on a self-respecting basis, and not to be allowed to lapse into pauperism. According to the latest budget requirements developed by the Jewish Charities in Chicago, a family of parents and three or four children must have an income of at least $125 per month. The Chicago Charities budget their dependent families on that basis.

"The philanthropic organizations should have one definite aim. They must set out to rehabilitate those families which through sickness or through misfortune, have broken away from the life of the community. They must raise these unfortunates until they once more become self-supporting and self-respecting members of our community.

"In Chicago this is being done by establishing business or creating occupations for those in poverty. Our organizations will furnish capital to establishing stores or business to start these people in life. This plan has met with great success in Chicago where as much as $3,000 has been expended on a single case. It has been estimated that in the past four years, over $30,000 has actually been saved to the Federation by taking away from these self-supporting families the need for receiving regular monthly relief.

"Another development included in the programme of the Chicago Federation, was the establishment of industrial shops where unemployed men and women, who, by reason of mental or physical deficiencies, were unable to earn a living, could work at some useful occupation, under skilled instructors. The third important innovation to social service work in Chicago, was the establishment of clinics for the examination of children and adults who were in need of assistance.

"In the development of this work, the layman must take his place alongside the trained professional social worker. There must be greater participation of the "lay" people in the work of the agencies. The layman cannot take the place of the experienced, professionally-trained social worker, but he can supplement and assist the director and his staff. Just as social service without trained workers can not develop, so without the interest and assistance of the laymen it cannot prosper. The board member's function is not only to raise money, but to interpret the work of the Federation to the community.

"A strong development in Jewish social service has been the inclusion and development of Jewish education as part of the programme of the Federation. It has now been accepted that much of social service loses its effectiveness without a strong element of religious education.

"The survey made by the Organized Charities in Chicago revealed the fact that only one child out of every seven brought to the attention of the relief societies, was receiving more and religious training. No matter how healthy a child may be, if he has not had a religious and cultural background he will get nowhere. This does not mean necessarily that religion is the panacea for the problems of social service, it will not say that children with religious education keep out of trouble, but I do say that there is no question that a child with religious education can withstand temptation more than one that has not received such training.

"Both a closer co-operation between professional and lay workers and a more energetic development of religious training are elements necessary to the success and progress of all social service undertakings."

aptly been named the "National Building."

"It is in every sense of the word a purely Canadian structure," was the striking tribute that Mayor Foster rendered it.

It was fitting that an organization like the Canadian National Telegraphs should have been among the first to respond when solicitations were made for tenants to occupy an all-Canada building. It was a proper recognition of the efforts of the builders to accomplish something that had never been done before—the erection of a really national building.

Probably the finest feature of this building is its location. It is situated midway between King and Queen Streets—Toronto's two most important cross line thoroughfares. In addition to that it is on Bay Street, probably to-day the most important street in the city. Many years ago it was a quiet residential street, but about 1912 there was a steady movement towards commercializing it. If the war hindered this progress, the reaction after the depression of the four years of fighting has been extreme. There has been an almost feverish building activity on Bay Street, and to-day it claims with more right than any other, the dignity of the appellation Toronto's Wall Street."

Real estate as well as financial men are in agreement on the prospects of this "Threadneedle Street." In recent years the erection of many large structures, where provision is made for office accommodation for financial and legal firms is making the street the core of the city's commercial life. King Street is crowded and has no more room. In addition, Bay Street is only a block from Yonge, and since it intersects with King it is bound to be and remain a most important centre.

The building itself is of reinforced concrete construction, twelve stories high, and is so designed that the maximum protection from fire is assured to every floor. With one exception, it is the highest concrete structure in the Dominion of Canada. It is equipped with all modern appliances and improvements. The object has been to spare no expense in providing tenants with the conveniences which they desire. This policy is a duplication of that which featured the Federal Building, where the comfort of patrons was a supreme end.

result in well lighted, airy offices, such as conduce to the health of the occupants. The management of the structure is the same as that of the Federal Building, and there the owners have established a reputation for giving good and courteous service.

In one other particular this building has excelled others, and that is in the record time in which it was constructed. On August 5, 1925, announcement was made that the city had leased the corner of Bay and Temperance, the lot being 76 by 82 feet. It was then stated that construction work would soon begin, the architects being the same who had designed the new Government Building at the Exhibition Grounds, and the new Northern Ontario Building.

Construction work actually got under way about the beginning of October. No time was lost and the venture was completed in record time. The entire work, after the foundation had been finished, was accomplished in seventy-seven working days.

Considerable comment has been attracted by the use of a peculiar stone. Leading building authorities examined with interest and praise the stone work, which was fashioned from Tyndall stone, quarried in Manitoba.

The exterior stone work is as a result extremely beautiful. Connoisseurs describe it as particularly excellent. It combines aesthetic qualities with utilitarian. Experts say that it possesses a hard and durable surface which enables it to withstand the rigors of the Canadian climate, with its drastic winter, to a far better degree than any of the imported products. It is superior to any stone that can be obtained in the United States.

On January 26 of this year, the exterior work on the building had been completed and Mayor Foster raised the Union Jack on the roof, in recognition of the completion of a building in which records had been broken. It was an important moment, for the National Building was the first to be completed of a number of important structures planned for 1926.

Walter Kraslow, prominent Brooklyn builder, has offered to take entire charge of the work of constructing the proposed Brooklyn University, and to forfeit his fee in connection with the work. "When it is understood," said the New York Evening Journal recently, "that the usual fee charged by construction companies for operations of this sort is ten per cent. cost plus, the magnitude of Mr. Kraslow's generosity at once becomes apparent."

Simon Epstein, banker, was recently awarded the Order of Chevalier of the Legion of Honour in France.

Truscon Steel Floretyle
New National Building

The use of Truscon Steel Floretyle in the New National Building at Toronto is a further tribute to the economy and reliability of Truscon's product for this type of reinforced concrete construction. This popular modern construction consists of rows of Truscon Floretyle—a specially designed hollow steel tyle—covered with a layer of concrete and separated by reinforced concrete joists. The Floretyles by acting as "fillers" save concrete, reduce weight, simplify construction and make for sound-proofness. These important building advantages are assured to the New National Building by Truscon Steel Floretyle.

Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association Needs More Capital

The Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association, which has been functioning for the past three and a half years, wants to enlarge its work. Founded by the Toronto Lodge, Bnai Brith, through means of a theatre night conducted by the Lodge, the proceeds of which were divided between the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and for the foundation of a Free Loan Association, it is not operated or controlled by the Lodge, but by members of the community.

The original subscription made by the Bnai Brith for the founding of the Association amounted to approximately $3,800.00, and the fund since then has gradually been increased by a theatre night, personal subscriptions and donations until the capital is over $8,000.00.

Officers and directors are: President, Samuel Kronick; vice-president, Nathan Phillips; treasurer, Elias Pullan; honorary secretary, Abraham Cohen; executive director, J. Irving Oelbaum; directors, Jacob Becker, H. Birnbaum, David Dunkelman, Julius Eisman, Charles Garfunkel, Louis Gelber, Sam Harris David Lavine, Abraham Levy, Herman Mendelson, J. Perkins, Dr. M. Pinick Joseph Schwartz, L. M. Singer, Nathan Smith, Barnet Weiss; official investigators, D. Lavine, S. Harris.

Each application is investigated and granted only if found worthy. The repayment of the loan must be guaranteed by two persons, who, in the opinion of the investigator and the Board (which meets regularly each week to deal with the applications) are financially responsible for the amount of the loan. The amounts of loans range from $25.00 to $200.00, and are repaid at the rates of from $2.00 to $10.00 weekly, in accordance with arrangements which are made at the time of the granting of the loan. No interest or any other charge is made in connection with the loans, and all applications receive equal consideration, being dealt with in accordance with the merits of the case only.

1,140 applications for loans have been received, of which 932 were granted. Loans which were granted: 56 to dry-goods stores; 24 to fruit stores; 32 to second-hand stores; 19 to teachers; 37 to operators; 20 to confectioners; 11 to barbers; 38 to shoe repairers; 55 to tailors, 39 to cleaners and pressers; 96 to dry goods peddlers; 10 to blacksmiths 95 to fruit peddlers; 55 to grocers; 30 to rag peddlers; 12 to watch repairers and jewellers; 30 to junk dealers; 15 to shoe stores; 15 to decorators and painters; 20 to poultry dealers; 12 to roofers and tinsmiths; 263 miscellaneous loans: Mattress manufacturers, farmers, harness makers, candy makers, shoe manufacturers, movie houses collectors, shochtim, compositors, cigar and stationery stores, restaurants rag workers, house wreckers, paper box manufacturers, butchers, book stores, bed manufacturers, smallware peddlers, delicatessen stores, furriers agents embroidery manufacturers, printers and advertisers, cartage and expressmen, plumbers, miscellaneous peddlers, bread drivers, vegetable peddlers milliners, shippers, plant manufacturers cutters, creamery stores, cap manufacturers, merchants, slipper manufacturers jobbers.

The total amount of loans granted since the beginning of the operations of the organization is $63,450.50.

The Association has been gradually increasing its scope and volume of loans in accordance with the following figures:

For the Periods	Amount Loans
January 1, 1923, to March 31, 1924	$14,965 00	193
April 1, 1924, to March 31, 1925	18,079 00	285
April 1, 1925, to March 31, 1926	25,021 50	382
April 1, 1926, to June 4, 1926	5,385 00	72

In general the repayment of the loans is very regular, and at no time have the arrears in connection with the repayment ever been permitted to assume large proportions. Although in a few cases applicants have failed to repay their loans, the guarantors have repaid any balances due, thus enabling the Association to show no losses. The average amount of the loans is about $60.00, and approximately 325 loan accounts are carried. The Association is trying to increase its capital and enlarge its work.

Some time ago this column was given over to the suggestion that Jewish institutions and organizations in Canada democratize themselves by rotating officers, changing directorates and by interesting membership from the different strata of community life. So many letters were sent in applause that it was impossible to print them, particularly, too, because many were anonymous. The deduction from these letters was that many a director and officer would be changed if there were only courage enough to dislodge him or her. To give strength to these letter-writers and publicity to the idea of democratizing Jewish communal activities the plan accepted recently by the board of directors of the Philadelphia Federation of Jewish Charities is given here.

The Philadelphia Federation last year raised four millions of dollars in less than a week for the erection of new community buildings. The Jewish community numbers 250,000, the Federation has 20,000 contributors and the budget runs into millions. There are fifty-three institutions affiliated with Federation, over which the Federation has no control. The new plan, if accepted by them, will grant a central board supreme power. It calls for the organization of a council of 100 to serve as a deliberative and advisory body, to plan campaigns for funds, to stimulate the interest of the public and to hold four meetings a year. This council is to be the direct representative of the Jewish community. During the annual Maintenance Fund Campaigns a representative to the Council will be chosen by each team. This group, together with twenty-five members appointed by the Federation president, plus the presidents of the constituent bodies is to form the Federation Council. The Council president will also be the Federation president. Council members, chosen annually, will elect their other officers. Each member of the Council is to be placed on one of the institutional boards to serve for one year as representative of the Council and to familiarize himself with the work of the institutions. When there is a vacancy on a board of an institution a Council member will be named for the place.

No one will be elected a director of the Federation unless he has served as a director of a constituent for at least one year. The constituents will in their by-laws limit the service of directors and officers to a maximum of ten years, although a person may be elevated to honourary directorship after five years of service. Multiple directorship and offices will be abolished and no person will hold the position of officer or director in more than two of the constituent institutions at one time, but he may be on the Federation board in addition.

This plan was proposed by Judge Horace Stern, president of the Philadelphia Federation. It grew out of his distaste for self-perpetuating boards which control the organizations and institutions. He believes that the public which does the paying should have the sole right to say who shall do the managing. His plan can be accepted by smaller communities or modified to suit their needs and organizations. Something like it is the only thing left to save Jewish communal life from lethargy and then decay.

The Toronto Hebrew Free Loan Association has a capital of $8,000 which has been lent, repaid and lent again over nine times in the past three and a half years and not a single dollar has been lost through non-payment of a loan. It has helped butchers, bakers and candlestick makers and many, many more deserving persons hard pressed.

The work this Association is doing must recommend itself to every right-thinking individual.

It gives more than charity.

It obviates the necessity of giving charity because it helps a man gain an economic footing and preserves for him intact his self-respect.

A man may receive charity, a little money from time to time, and never solve his problem, but give him a substantial loan in a lump and there is every chance that he will soon stand alone. The Federation has found it advisable often to be guarantor to the Free Loan Association for a man who acquires self-reliance and an enterprising spirit when faced with the obligation to repay.

The Free Loan needs money with which to carry on.

You be one to volunteer to join and bring in others.

Come forward and help the Free Loan to give some struggling man a hand up.

The principle of G'Milath Chasodim is an appeal to every Jew.

Annual Federation Report

to do this kind of work with the present staff of two investigators, but we have found that the time that must be given to the finding of jobs is more than can be spared from the pressure of other work. And yet this work would unquestionably mean a real saving of money to the Federation. Last year when we had the services for a few months of one of the university students, twenty-two jobs were secured at a saving to the Federation of $200 per month which would otherwise have had to be spent in relief. Over fifty employers were interviewed before those twenty-two jobs were found. There is no other agency that could adequately handle our Jewish unemployed.

One of the important communal activities directly affecting the work of the Federation is the Mothers' and Children's Camp at Bronte, at present financed by the Maternity Aid, separate from the Federation. Practically every member of the Maternity Ladies' Aid supporting this work is a member of Federation. The officers of the Maternity Aid even the special committee managing the camp, are workers for Federation. The co-operation between the Maternity Aid and the Family Welfare Board is cordial, close and constant. Most of the mothers taken to the camp are Federation families. The workers for the Federation help prepare the list of eligible mothers and make many of the investigations. There has been effected the past month a careful co-ordination between the Boys' Camp, the Girls' Camp and the Mothers' Camp, whereby all three organizations will have a joint registration and take out the different members of the same family at the same time. The medical examination of the mothers and infants will be held this summer at the Federation office. From practically every point, the Mothers' Camp is another activity of Federation. Yet while the other two camps are financed by the Federation, the lack of funds has made it impossible for Federation to consider financing the Mothers' Camp as well. The need for this work and the necessity for raising funds somehow has compelled the Maternity Aid to appeal to the public through a bazaar, a medium that is frowned upon by Federation and is subversive of Federation principles. This is one of the activities, costing about $4,000 that should be taken over by Federation at the earliest opportunity.

The year 1926 marks the tenth year of the existence of the Federation. The past nine years has been a struggle for existence, for bread and butter, so to speak. Never was Federation far from literally financial bankruptcy. Nevertheless the Federation has made strides. It has increased its receipts from $24,000 the first year and $36,000 the second year to $71,000 the eighth year, $61,000 the ten months of the ninth year and from present appearance to over $95,000 for 1926.

Its expenditures have more than kept pace with its receipts. If anything expenditures were always a little ahead. We have always had a "decent, respectable deficit," which among the very best philanthropic institutions, as pointed out by Judge Stern, of Philadelphia, is a sign of good breeding and gentility.

But what of the second decade and in particular of the first few years of the second decade?

In the first place the Federation must become actually, and not only theoretically representative of the entire community. The Federation should not be merely the largest or the strongest single Jewish organization in Toronto. It should be the Jewish community of Toronto, organized for a comprehensive Jewish communal development. As Samuel Goldsmith, secretary of the National Jewish Conference, said in Denver, last year, "A sound Federation and a sound Jewish community are synonymous. Federations are important because they can, in all cities (and do, in some cities) represent the thinking and planning of the Jewish community."

Two years ago at the Jewish National Conference held in Toronto, Louis M. Cahn, of Chicago, in speaking on the duty of Federations to further Jewish education, said: "Federations are no longer organizations whose function is limited to providing funds for merely charitable institutions and agencies, agencies that administer relief in its various forms. The scope of Federation has broadened to include various kinds of preventive and constructive work — the Federation is the organization that must weld the entire community together."

At both the Denver and Cleveland conferences, emphasis was placed on the expanding functions of Federations. In the further and broader development of the Federation idea lies the best hope for a progressive richer development of Jewish communal life.

What are some of the necessary steps before us in the development of our Federation?

In the first place a larger membership. With a population of 40,000 we should have, as judged by other cities such as Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St.

Louis, Buffalo, not less than 3,000 members.

All the existing, established and proved necessary philanthropic organizations should be members of Federation. To-day there are five large and important Jewish philanthropic institutions, outside of Federation, each with its own membership, and each annually running bazaars, campaigns, theatre parties, etc., etc., in the endeavour to raise sufficient funds. Each is doing a special and worth-while piece of work. The same community supports both the Federation and these five agencies, although with "tsores" and at separate large collection and campaign expenses. Why should not these five, with the twelve already in federation make a united and larger Federation?

The community should be prepared to support through Federation, a comprehensive programme of Jewish education. The Talmud Torah is spacious and well-built, with bright, large classrooms, library and chapel. The staff is progressive and the curriculum and pedagogy modern and according to well-established principles. Jewish education is now an integral part of Federation activities in many of the larger cities in America. The Brunswick Talmud Torah could be the nucleus of a programme of Jewish education that could be fostered by the community through the Federation.

All appeals for funds for Jewish national and international objects, whether Palestine or Europe, should be through the Federation. This very thing was effected in St. Louis the past six months where a Jewish community chest fund of $600,000 was raised, out of which all appeals will be met. It may be noted that two years ago, St. Louis raised less than $200,000 for Federation.

This year Toronto is raising for its local and other needs, exclusive of the proposed J.D.C. campaign, the sum of over $200,000, at a combined expense of multiple campaigns, and collections of over $25,000. How much better, and wiser for one campaign, for one organization, for one programme of communal development.

PROBLEMS OF GERMAN JEWRY

German Jewry has been struggling with the economic problem together with the rest of the population. The number of unemployed has greatly increased and the Jews, especially the recent immigrants from eastern Europe, have been subject to great suffering. This has brought to the fore the organization of the Jewish communal institutions and their sources of income. Last summer it was brought out that the contributions to the charitable organizations have decreased to such an alarming extent as to make it impossible to continue the ordinary congregational and communal activities. It was shown then that only sixty-three congregations in the whole of Prussia had the services of a regular rabbi; that 285 communities did not even have a religious teacher, that 400 were without a cemetery and without a synagogue. These figures aroused the attention of the leaders and at the time a federation of communities was organized, in the hope that through concerted effort much more good will be accomplished. This organization, however, is still very young and apparently has not gained the confidence of the entire population. It comprises now 630 independent congregations and is in co-operation with another similar organization of the strictly orthodox element known as the Halberstadt Union, which comprises ninety congregations, one-half of which also belong to the larger federation. The government allocated the sum of 210,000 marks to the Prussian Federation and 30,000 marks to the Halberstadt Union, neither of which is at all adequate to the needs of the communities.

The problem is very acute also in other parts of Germany and especially in the capital city, Berlin. Almost every German-Jewish paper contains long articles and editorials, with all kinds of suggestions as to how to meet the situation. Some suggest the introduction of the Maaser system, imposing upon each Jew the payment of one-tenth of his income to the communal treasury. While this might suffice for the conduct of the various organizations in the metropolis, there will be the great difficulty of collecting these sums since the government cannot be relied upon to enforce the ruling. Meetings were recently held in a number of centers including Baden, Bavaria, Saxony and the Rhine provinces, at which the problem was discussed from various angles. At one of these meetings it was urged that the small communities should be entirely released from providing support to itinerant poor since these should be helped by the larger communities and given fare to the next larger towns so that they do not stop off in the smaller towns.

Still the Jewish communal life in Germany is not stopped and the controversies among the various factions are as heated as they were in the good old times. The Zionists and the anti-Zionists still carry on a lively fight which manifests itself at all public gatherings. Recently Dr. Carl Rosenthal rabbi in Duisburg made a statement at a public gathering in which he spoke of the uncleanliness that characterizes the Jews coming from Eastern Europe. Dr. Klee, Dr. Loewe and Lewitt, all belonging to the Zionist party, brought in an interpellation into the Berlin Jewish municipal council, asking that this rabbi be disciplined for the utterances by which he insulted a large number of Jewish taxpayers, who supply his car salary.

Anti-Semitism is still on the increase in Germany, as was shown at the annual meeting of the German Society for combating anti-Semitism which was held in Berlin recently under the chairmanship of Dr. Gotheim. Dr. Heinrich Pudor, a notorious anti-Semite was sentenced to five months' imprisonment for an article which he wrote in which he spoke of riots against Jews and said that Hindenberg was a prisoner of the Jews while Stresseman should be murdered.

And now we serve Oshawa too

The first bundle of family wash from our newly-opened Oshawa branch office last week was quickly followed by many others. From now on the territory from Toronto east as far as Oshawa, including Whitby, will be able to enjoy the same family wash service that we give to Toronto, including the super-speed "24-hour wash." If not on the phone, a line dropped to this office will bring our driver to your home and start you on real wash-day comfort. Remember, there is no cheaper nor better way of doing "family wash," and our success is due to using family methods—soft water, pure soap and ten rinsings. Get in touch with us to-day.

Mrs. J. J. Marks and Mrs. Harry Dover were joint hostesses at a crystal shower and luncheon, Thursday of last week. The table was centered with a basket of roses. Covers were laid for thirty.

Miss Fanny Feller entertained at a luncheon party tea-room last week in honour of two of this month's brides, Misses Pearl Goldfield and Anne Gencher. They were presented with gifts from the hostess. The table was adorned with summer flowers and covers were laid for sixteen.

Miss Pearl Goldfield, whose marriage to Chas. Wexler takes place June 27, was guest of honour at a surprise party given by the members of the 13th Troop Ottawa Brownie Pack, in the York Street School. Miss Goldfield is the Brown Owl of this Troop. She was also captain of the 13th Company Ottawa Hebrew Girl Guides for a number of terms. Frances Torontow presented the bride-elect with a coffee percolator on behalf of the members. The Misses Sarah Torontow and Irene Uditsky were in charge of the entertainment.

Engel—Kert

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, 346 Wilbrod Street, Wednesday afternoon, June 8, of Claribel (Clare), youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Kert, and Harry Engel, of New York, son of the late O. Engel and of Mrs. Engel, now of Montreal. The ceremony was attended by the relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom, and later, at four o'clock, a larger reception was held. At one end of the drawing-room where the ceremony took place, was a bower effect of flowers, formed of ferns, palms and white lilacs. Elsewhere roesbuds were used in decoration. Rabbi Julius Berger, of Montreal, officiated, assisted by Rabbis J. Mirsky and J. D. Berger. T. J. Palmer played the piano. James McIntyre played violin accompaniments, and during the signing of the register E. Stafford Green sang "O Promise Me." Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. S. Ryan, as matron of honour. Hyman M. Kert, brother of the bride, was best man and there were two ushers, Laurence Herzog, of New York, and Charles Kert, brother of the bride, who assisted in escorting the guests to their places for the ceremony. A gown of ivory white crepe romain in Victorian style, embroidered in seed pearls and with a cape and bouffant effect of rose point lace, was worn by the bride. The skirt and bodice were adorned with tiny hand-made flowers of the white crepe romain, the petals of which were outlined with silver threads. At the left side was a corsage, trail of orange blossoms and white velvet ribbons, the ends of which were attached to the left wrist. White silk mittens were worn and a veil of Limerick lace was arranged closely on the head to each side of which were tiny trails of orange blossoms. The bride's flowers were a Victorian bouquet of rosebuds and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Ryan, matron-of-honour, wore a gown of beige georgette embroidered in a deeper tone and her hat was of lacy beige straw trimmed with brown velvet. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay of roses, pansies and forget-me-nots. Mrs. Kert, mother of the bride, wore grey georgette entirely embroidered in grey soutache braid, the folds at one side held with a rhinestone ornament. A corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley was worn. Mrs. Engel, the groom's mother, was in black crepe romain with black hat with ospreys, and a corsage of American Beauty rosebuds. Among other guests present were Miss B. Rosner, of Winnipeg, Mrs. Alan Bronfman, Mrs. A. W. Jacobs, Miss Naomi Cohen and Mrs. S. Kolber, all of Montreal. At the reception, Miss Pauline Gould played the piano. The tea-table, centered with a wedding cake, was presided over by Mesdames S. Kolber, M. Wener, Chas. Kert and H. Dover, assisted by Misses Ethel Wener, Pauline Gould, Mary and Bertha Slonemsky, Eva Abramson, Bea and Esther Benwick, Eva Bilsky, Bee Sugarman and Mrs. Rose Gordon. Mr. Engel and his bride went to New York, whence they left immediately via Chicago and Winnipeg for Lake Louise. They will be there for a couple of weeks before going to Vancouver and California. They will return to Ottawa in September for a brief visit before going to live in New York. Travelling, the bride wore a strictly tailored suit of navy blue poiret twill with white hair-line stripe, white felt hat with black velvet brim and wrist purse of black and white leather.

Queen Esther Chapter held a bridge and mah jongg at the Lewis Tea Rooms, 107 Drummond Street, Tuesday afternoon, June 8. Eighteen tables were filled and the receipts went towards the chapter's Keren Hayesod pledge. Hostesses: Mesdames Bacaal, bazaar, Schvemar, Pappelbaum, Leibovitch, Dick Climan, Rabinovitch and Sigman. Closing meeting, Tuesday evening, June 15.

JEWISH NATIONAL LIBRARY

The French Government presented to the library the scientific edition of the French Palaeontology in thirty-eight volumes and a four-volume edition of the "Geology of France," by Haug.

The Italian committee working on behalf of the library sent us a large consignment of books, among them the collected works of Carducci and a number of publications on recent history of the Italian Jews.

The library received from Russia a number of documents on the history of Russian Jewry during the last years, as well as some Hebrew manuscripts, among them a handwritten book by the Karaite Mosche Bagi (176 leaves).

Dr. Heinrich Necheles, Union Medical College, Peking, gave the library a number of books on physiology.

Dr. J. D. Berkson, New York, has organized a group of teachers whose special care is the promotion of the pedagogical department of the library.

HAPPIER, not only because these frozen dainties are so delightful, but because they are healthful as well. They are far more easily digested than heavier desserts.

Consider the many ways in which the happiness and comfort of the home are increased by ice. Its use for freezing home-made ice cream is only one of many that cannot be duplicated by artificial means.

Yet ice costs so little that you can use all you want. Make warm weather more livable, more enjoyable, by making use of all of the services of ice.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery, are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

MARRIAGES

Birnbaum—Liss

The marriage of Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Liss, to Herbert Birnbaum, was solemnized at the Primrose Club, Tuesday, June 8, at 6.30 p.m., Reverend Kaplan officiating. Mrs. Dorothy P. Liss sang "All Joy be Thine." The bride, who was given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown of ivory satin, trimmed with net. Her veil of embroidered net was surmounted by a head-dress of rose point lace, caught at both sides with clusters of orange blossoms in cap effect and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lillies-of-the-valley. The matron of honour, Mrs. Alfred Cohen, wore an importation of ivory marquise satin, and carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. Alfred Cohen was best man. The flower-girls were Freda Birnbaum and Ruth Liss, wearing frocks of white georgette over pink satin, trimmed with little rosebuds. They carried baskets of daisies, sweet peas and rose petals. The bride's mother wore a gown of mauve chiffon beaded, and the groom's mother wore a French gown of silver metallic lace encrusted with rhinestones. The out-of-town guests were Mrs. J. Gettenberg, Mrs. William Weitz, Sam Gettenberg, Mr. and Mrs. L. Tropp, Mrs. L. Freed and Irving Nechols, all of New York; Misses Beatrice and Jessie Liss of Brooklyn, N.Y.; S. K. Baum, of Windsor, and Miss Mary Ross, of Rochester. Mr. and Mrs. Birnbaum left for New York, Atlantic City, and will return via Montreal, the bride travelling in a French burgundy quilted silk ensemble with hat to match. They will live in the Laurada Apartments.

An old phrase soon destined to come into popularity again is the well-known saying, "It's the Old Army Game." Why? That's the title of W. C. Fields' first starring picture for Paramount, which arrives at Loew's Theatre next Monday for a week's showing.

Old-timers will testify that the phrase has nothing to do with the army. Fields himself says it means "Never give a sucker an even break." And that just about explains it.

Elmer Prettywillie (W. C. Fields), proprietor of a small town drug store in Florida, has lots of customers and very little cash. They buy stamps, use his telephone, read magazines and hang around. His clerk, Mildred Marshall (Louise Brooks) and the town's only claim to fame, is the shop's main attraction. Elmer is very fond of her.

One morning, Mildred is talking to Tessie Overholt (Blanche Ring), the station agent, when George Delevan (William Gaxton), a New York "go-getter," dashes off the train to send a telegram. One look at Mildred makes him forget the wire, and while still in a daze, the Pullman leaves without its passenger.

JEWISH GIRLS' CLUB

Since September, 1925, 272 new members have registered at the Girls' Club, there has been an attendance of 19,392 girls and 1,881 boys, making a total attendance of 21,073. Total number of classes, 1,015.

During May Evelyn Girls, Hermant Girls, Merry Sprites, Adelaide Girls, J. C. H. Group and Solidrams went on hikes. Four different groups from the sewing school, including about three classes each, held picnics. The A.E.C. Girls and the 76th Company Girl Guides also held outings.

At the closing of the sewing school, Goldie Tolchinsky, the smallest member of the sewing school, age four, presented Mrs. Bernard Goldstein with flowers.

Evelyn Girls' closing meeting was a dance at Community House, Saturday evening, May 22. Their boy friends were invited. The party was chaperoned by their leader, Miss Kathleen Samuel.

Three garden parties have been held by the Adelaide Girls, June 2 and 3, Beatrix Girls, June 9, and the Wags with the A.D.S. Girls, June 10. The two latter groups have in their two clubs about twenty-three members. They sold 400 tickets at five cents each. The average age is ten years. Their net proceeds were $33, of which $25 was given to the Girls' Club. Leaders, Misses Rebecca Hyman and Sadie Brown.

The Solidrams had an outing, after which they all went to the home of Gertrude Harris, Lansdowne Avenue, for a dance. Their leader, Miss Cecille Berenson, accompanied them.

English classes will be continued during the summer. Many girls are also coming for typewriting practice.

Miss Nellie Cohen is in charge of volley-ball, punch-ball, tether tennis, teeters, swings, slides, sand pile, singing games, etc., with the children. Come to the garden party. Baseball is carried on at Bellwoods and Trinity Parks and tennis at Alexandra Park.

The Bertha Draimin Girls were entertained at afternoon tea at the home of their honorary president, Mrs. Chas. Draimin, Saturday, June 5.

Baseball league met at Community House Monday evening, June 14.

SUZANNE LENGLEN TO WED JACQUES OFFENBACH

Suzanne Lenglen, woman tennis champion of the world, is engaged to be married to Jacques Brinde Offenbach, grandson of the famous composer Offenbach, whose "Tales of Hoffman" is an operatic classic.

While the marriage will take place at an early date, it is not definitely known whether it will be before or after the Wimbledon tournament but it is understood that Mlle. Lenglen's entry in that tournament will stand in any case. Likewise it has not yet been decided whether she will continue to play tournament tennis after her marriage or definitely retire from the championship. The couple expect to make their home in Paris.

A Recent Bride

MRS. IRWIN GOODFELLOW

Who before her marriage was Dorothy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Heller, of Quebec Avenue.

The news surprised the tennis world; at first it was received with incredulity, for it has often been reported that Suzanne was engaged, only to be subsequently denied.

Suzanne and Jacques have known each other for four years, but as he rarely visited the tennis courts no one suspected the romance. He was a frequent visitor, however, to the Lenglen home. He encouraged Suzanne in her literary efforts and helped to launch her as a novelist.

Mlle. Lenglen was born in 1899 in Compiegne, France, and was taught to play tennis by her father. Since the end of the World War her supremacy among women tennis players the world over had been virtually unchallenged until the rise of Miss Wills. In 1921 Mlle. Lenglen defaulted to Mrs. Molla Mallory at Forest Hills, but in 1922 and 1923 she decisively defeated Mrs. Mallory.

Rabbi Samuel's Editorials

he took the perfectly understandable opportunity of warning them against some of the defects that develop in the machinery of systematized philanthropy. He delivered a useful and timely address.

It is inevitable that in the process of change in the social structure, many virtues lose their expression. We often bewail, unreasoningly, the passing of the old-fashioned virtues, and imagine that we see no compensating qualities in the newer conditions. That is a short-sighted view. Mankind is fundamentally virtuous. Given but time to sense the new direction, the instincts of kindness, love and sympathy will express themselves in practical adaptation.

The magnificent standards of Jewish virtue have never been lost. Practice has sometimes been suspended in the confusion of changed circumstances. But the spirit ultimately asserts itself and produces the same old virtues in new adjustment. In his research after the now famous Marquis Wheat, which is the great wealth of Canada, Dr. Saunders evolved many types of wheat that manifested a combination of defects and a suppression of the good qualities. But Dr. Saunders did not destroy wheat by his experiments. The unsatisfactory and unsuitable kinds paved the way for the production of the grain that contained all the desired qualities adjusted to the needs and conditions of the country.

Judaism is passing through a similar experience. When has Judaism not had to face the necessity for new adjustments? The fine qualities of Jewish concern for the poor and unfortunate that had such beautiful expression in the smaller self-contained communities of other days have not been lost. It was easy in the past for the kindhearted to find opportunity for their benevolence. It was easy for the distressed to find access to their benefactors. It was easy to remedy the comparatively simple ills of the social system of those days. But in these days the complexity of life prevents to a large extent the kind-hearted from the personal exercise of charity. The poor cannot find out for themselves those who can help them, and the problems of the unfortunate are too difficult for solution, except on a most insignificant and inadequate scale, by the individual touch of suppliant and benefactor. Relief and rehabilitation in the social world must be organized on an efficient basis. Kindheartedness alone is insufficient. Knowledge and the ability to apply that knowledge to the best advantage is the prime requirement for modern philanthropy. Time was when the rabbi was instructor of morals, teacher of the young, doctor, lawyer and charity agent all in one. One by one the exercise of all these faculties has become specialized until they are all now distinct professions. Social work is now a profession demanding as high a degree of training and character as do the clerical, legal, teaching, medical and nursing professions. Federation exists for the purpose of providing trained social workers with adequate means for their work. The relation of the giver to the Federation consists in the writing out of a cheque. That is for the time being a loss. Federation becomes standardized and bureaucratized due to inadequacy of funds and shortness of vision on the part of directors. That is for the time being a loss. But Federation is also finding a continually widening field of givers and a continually increasing size of contribution. It is also finding a continually improving method of treating the needy. Those are gains. The operation of Federation has exposed a number of people who give inadequately or not at all, who promise and do not pay. But at the same time it is discovering ways of influencing those people, of improving their social conscience, of making them useful members of society. Such people always existed. Formerly their existence was not so noticeable and was ignored. Now we look out for them and try to cure their sickness. He who vowed and did not pay was known in Bible times, as well as he who swore to his own hurt and changed not. He who dealt wisely with the poor was blessed and he who dealt with a grudging hand was despised.

The pitfalls of Federation have become revealed through our working on a wider scale. We must accept them as pitfalls and bend our energies to avoid them. They give us the courage of battle yet to be won. They indicate progress and not retrogression. Standing before the vanguard of the future, Dr. Wise urged the men who were solid supporters of Federation to aim at remedying the defects, so that Federation could fulfil all that was demanded of it. He pointed out the objective and indicated the direction to its approach. That what he said has given rise to some feeling of discouragement is due to lack of understanding the audience to which he spoke, for what he said was a tribute to the intelligence of his audience. At the same time let it be confessed that he did imply in about two masterly sentences all that has been written above.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

The article by the Rev. Herbert J. Samuel dealing with the Board of Deputies of the British Jews in your issue of April 23, has been read with considerable interest on this side.

I can say with confidence that the Board would welcome the representation of the great Dominion communities; and although the remoteness of its place of meeting might at first view seem to prevent it from playing a direct part in the solution of local problems, yet it has been found possible to keep touch with those overseas congregations which elect deputies, since they have frequently elected as their representatives some former resident in the constituency who has settled in England. The representative so elected takes his seat on the Board, keeps in correspondence with the body which has elected him, bringing to the notice of the board its local problems whilst taking part in the general work of the Board on behalf of Jewish communities throughout the Empire. There are many occasions on which the Board's services are of real value to Jews outside the United Kingdom, for Jewish problems have no territorial limits. An attack on Jewish interests in one part of the Empire, particularly in the Mother Country, is always likely to find an echo elsewhere. The Dominions, in formulating new legislation, are apt to look to the Mother Country to see what she has done in similar directions. Hence any failure on the part of the board to safeguard Jewish interests within the United Kingdom might easily result in a calamity elsewhere in the Empire. To take one subject only, viz.: the vigilant safeguarding of Shechita, in which the Board has taken a most prominent part. The protection which this portion of its work has afforded to Jews extends far beyond the shores of the Mother Country, since any legal impediment imposed on Jewish ritual in Great Britain would form a dangerous precedent for legislation in all parts of the world. The same applies to many other sections of the work of the Board for example, in connection with Sunday labour, limitation of shop hours, anti-Semitism and education. Upon these and other issues affecting the rights and well-being of the Jews in all parts of the world, the Board is so constituted that it speaks in the name of the Jews of the British Empire. It would, however, greatly strengthen the Board's voice if the communities overseas were represented to a greater extent upon the Board. The whole fabric of Jewish resistance to injurious influences—as often as not the result of ignorance or misunderstanding rather than prejudice—would thereby be closer knit and more effective. There is one point in particular to which I should call the attention of the Jewish overseas communities, when weighing the advantages of sending deputies to represent them at the Board. A considerable portion of the Board's efforts is directed, through a Joint Foreign Committee, to studying and coping with the most difficult problems relating to the welfare of the Jews in Eastern Europe, millions of whom are struggling for their faith and for the right to exist. This obviously is work which affects and must interest every Jew wherever he happens to reside. Possibly when these considerations are weighed, it will be found that the balance is in favour of a larger overseas representation taking part in the deliberations of the Board of Deputies, the only representative body of the Jews of the British Empire.

I am, sir,
Your obedient servant
CHARLES H. L. EMANUEL
Solicitor and Secretary

Philon Fresco, secretary, visited the Angora Government and laid the whole matter before the highest officials of the state. The result was that the Jews were entirely exonerated from the charge made against them. The Minister of the Interior said that even if it were true that some persons sent such a message, the Government is convinced that the Turkish Jewry as a whole is loyal and devoted to Turkey as much as any other element of the community. The press has subsequently changed its tone and the attacks against the Jews which had been a regular feature in all the papers during the past few weeks have now been discontinued. It was however, painful to the Jewish leaders to realize that it was necessary for them to take the initiative in this matter and that the Government authorities did not on their own account deny the accusations at once.

Judah Marmor and Marvin Minster, two Jewish high school pupils of New York City, have won the second ($500) and third ($250) prizes, respectively, in the regional finals of the Constitutional contest on the Constitution conducted by the New York Times.

A. B. Shiffrin, the rising young short-story writer, has won the first prize ($100) in the short-story contest of the "Brith Sholom News." The second prize ($75) went to Nettie [illegible] Pitcher of Whittier, Cal., and the third prize ($50) went to William Ernest Denton, of Washington, D.C.

TURKISH JEWS UNDER SHADOW OF SUSPICION

The Turkish Jews have lived through the last few weeks a most anxious period. The newspapers published a report that 300 prominent Jews of Smyrna and Constantinople had sent a telegram to the King of Spain, expressing their loyalty and faithfulness to Spain. This the press interpreted as an act of treason and on account of that demanded the expulsion of all the Jews from Turkey and some of them even openly advocated acts of violence against them. The Jewish communities of Smyrna and Constantinople have protested their innocence in the matter and asked of the Government to institute a thorough inquiry, claiming that this was the work of some anti-Semite who forged the signatures of prominent Jews to a telegram, if such a message was sent. A delegation of leading Jews, headed by Marco Naoum, president of the Jewish community of Constantinople, and
